DEANNE HERRICK HONORED WITH BRIDAL SHOWER

Miss Deanne Herrick was the guest of honor at a bridal shower held at the home of Mrs. Richard Sajdak in Frederic on Thursday evening, October 1st. Co-hostesses were Mrs. Al Elzinga, Mrs. Allan Lucksted and Miss Judy Sorenson.

The twenty-five guests played games for entertainment, and the prizes won were turned over to the bride-elect. Following this, Deanne opened her many lovely gifts, assisted by her hostesses. An interesting part of this was a sort of treasure hunt which was required of Deanne, as the composite parts of a present from her hostesses were cleverly hidden around the premises, and she had to search out each item until the set was complete.

A dessert luncheon was served at the conclusion of a most enjoyable evening.

BEAR STAMP 2

Bear hunters will need this special $2.00 stamp on small game licenses before stalling the bulky animals in Michigan this fall. Conservation Department game men feel the new stamp requirement will improve management of those big game animals and curtail a waste of bears which has increased in recent years because of indiscriminate killing. A metal seal will be issued with each stamp, similar to the one used for deer. Bears may still be hunted during deer seasons on a deer license. No stamp or seal will be required. Bear stamps and seals are available through mail or personal application at the Department's Lansing office. They may also be obtained at all Department district offices and the Highway Department's information office at Mackinaw City.

Boat Buying Time

By Charles L. Polinski

You probably noticed this past summer that there were more boats on the Great Lakes and inland lakes than the year previously. Boating of all descriptions is becoming a fast and growing sport that has swept across the nation. Now is the time to think about buying that boat you have dreamed of for so long. In winter time boat dealers have to keep stock moving the best they can. Storage space costs money and it is far better to sell a boat at a reduced price than it is to suffer a loss because of costly storage space.

If you are not planning on buying a new one this year perhaps a second hand one has caught your eye. A row boat? If it has a fresh coat of paint and you are dealing with a stranger, look out there might be a catch. As a rule franchised dealers are reputable people or they would lose their boat dealer's license.

Use a pen knife to carefully check for rot spots. On a row boat the most common place to look is at the bottom of the stern where most of the water runs to. Poke around the seams and see that they are well caulked, and caulked with the proper material. "Feeling" for rot spots this way will not cause any damage and the dealer does understand your concern. Keep in mind how many passengers will ride in it and buy your boat accordingly. For my self, I like a small rubber raft for those hard to get at spots where giant bass are not overly fished. They are just right for two people and are easy to transport. A tire pump provides the needed air.

On sail boats one has to be more careful. Besides checking out rot spots and seams in it give the mast a good going over for hidden cracks. Test all pulleys. Make certain the ropes are not badly frayed. Watch for mildew spots on the canvas. If the sails are down have the owner hoist them to see if they fit properly without any sags. Always on larger craft see if the owner will let you put it to "sea" so you can "try it on for size." Many faults are discovered when a boat is under sail.

On small cruisers, and the larger which are like floating homes, there are hundreds of things to check. Look over the hull and see if it is in line. Go below and check it for dryness. Be sure there are no serious damages here. It is the most important and expensive part of a craft. If an ice box is built check behind it. Much condensation accumulates there and causes hidden rot. See that all electrical wiring and outlets are in working condition. Above all, check under the power house for additional rot. Although a good many take proper care of their craft a few do forget this out of the way spot. While down there check for rot where the propeller shafts enter the stern. See that the shaft is in "top" condition. A wrenched shaft will reduce the speed, cost more for fuel, and wear out the engine quickly.

If possible have someone with you who is familiar with marine motors. Have him check the timing, spark and wiring. Be sure the motor is sitting in it's proper position. If it is not, it was removed for a reason. Maybe the motor is bad and who ever worked on it was inefficient. Sometimes disreputable dealers, though far and few between, will slap an engine in for a quick sale. Maybe they had a "fish" on the line but did not complete the sale. So be careful. You may wind up buying the lemon yourself.

Occasionally a boat will come up the Mississippi River, enter the Illinois River and then find itself for sale somewhere in the Great Lakes region. If it does chances are it will have terezo worms. These worms bore into the underside of crafts and their holes go unnoticed by the naked eye. Again the pen knife comes in handy. They can do as much damage as the common termite can to a wood-frame house. If you find any, chances are there will be many.

The salt from sea water will ruin the motor, motor mounts, and all other metal it comes in heavy contact with. If it has entered the engine it will be a short matter of time before the engine is rendered useless. So watch for signs of corrosion.

They have trailers to fit everything from a small rowboat to those sixty foot floating palaces. But remember, the bigger the boat the harder it is to haul about. An improper trailer will cause damage to the boat, and the trailer. Be sure to choose the right trailer. One particular company puts out a trailer that lifts the boat up and down and has a winch for letting the boat into the water. A real muscle saver.

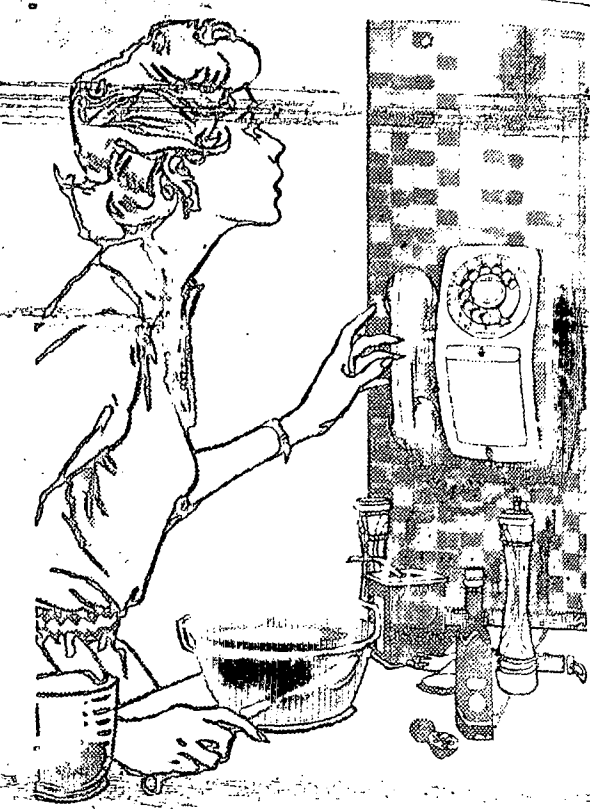

Storing a boat depends on the size. Smaller craft can be left on the trailer and parked in the garage. Some boat owners leave the boat on the trailer out-stall the excellent meal.

Looking At Our Future . . .

With last week's edition of the Crawford County Avalanche, we marked a full fifteen years as editor and publisher of this county's newspaper. During that decade and a half, we have had many enjoyable moments of our work with you folks. We would be less than honest if we did not add that at times we have been unhappy with certain aspects of our work and of our community. But all in all, the happy side weighs the heaviest.

The past decade and a half in Grayling and Crawford county has probably seen more progress than the 80 years previous all put together. But amazing as that may seem to many, listen to our prediction: we honestly and sincerely believe that the next fifteen years will show more progress, growth and prosperity for Grayling and Crawford County than the past 95 years preceding that.

Instead of hurrying our area as some people believe, we feel the new four lane divided limited access highway which will be completed soon from the southern border of Michigan to the Mackinac Bridge will be of untold benefit to us and to all of the north country.

With a little common sense and frugality in Washington and Lansing, the next 40 years to the year 2,000 will reduce such amazing steps forward for the human race that if it could be foretold now would stagger the imagination. Have you ever thought about trying to explain to your long gone forefathers (if they were here) the atom, television, radio, automobiles, airplanes, trucks, electricity, washers, dryers, refrigerators and all of the other modern things of life which we take for granted?

Well, if we could look ahead at this moment to the next forty years and what they will bring and make commonplace in the lives of us all, we would be just as dumbfounded and unbelieving.

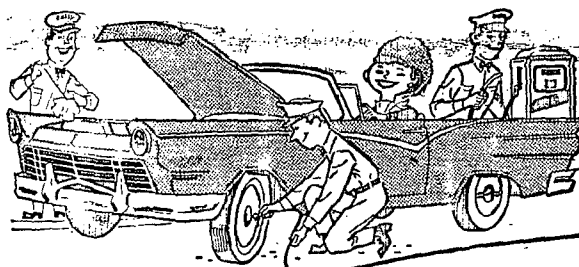

Here in our community, progress will step up in speed as the years go along and with it more prosperity will unfold for all. Grayling will grow in size and importance in this part of the state. Located as it is in the very center of the northern half of the lower peninsula, we predict it will become a warehousing and distribution center to cover the expanding north country.

Located on the new superhighway with excellent air facilities and railroad main line, this area just can not help but progress. We hope we can continue in the editor's chair for a few more years to watch this unfolding of growth in this area and we further hope that our prediction of an ever increasing speed of progress will instill further faith in our community with you. Cadillac

The Fifty-fifth...and the Finest!

It was shortly after the turn of the century that the first Cadillac car—"the automobile built to the highest standards it is possible to enforce on the production of a motor car"—made its appearance.

Every year since—save for a period when Cadillac devoted its energies to the national defense—a new interpretation of this unique goal has been presented to the world's motorists.

The superlative motor car illustrated above is the fifty-fifth in this unprecedented succession of distinguished automotive creations.

And it is, far and away, the finest and the noblest Cadillac of them all!

Never before has Cadillac artistry created such elegance of form and line. It has a commanding presence that is uniquely Cadillac.

Never before has Cadillac engineering produced so abundantly. The car is smooth and quiet to a degree that challenges belief.

Never before has Cadillac craftsmanship provided such interior luxury. And the complement of conveniences has never been more satisfying.

No matter how many of the fifty-five Cadillacs you may have owned and enjoyed over the years—you still have a wonderful experience ahead of you in this latest "car of cars."

We suggest you see and drive it very soon. And we hope you will come expecting great things.

Urge Unity To Improve State

UNIFIED EFFORTS TO improve Michigan's business climate have been urged by leaders of both parties.

Both Gov. G. Mennen Williams and Paul D. Bagwell, Republican candidate for governor in 1958, have suggested the interests of Michigan should be put ahead of political considerations and suspicions.

But this may be too much to expect. Another election campaign is in the making—and both Republicans and Democrats say it appears the "business climate" may be an issue as it was in 1958.

Michigan's reputation will suffer still more if the 1960 campaign echoes 1958. This is a warning that comes from between the lines of the widely-circulated report on Michigan's economic future prepared by the Upjohn Institute for Employment Research under direction of William Haber, University of Michigan economist.

"Guard zealously the good name of the state," Haber urged. "Stop undermining its reputation by exaggerating its problems and minimizing its virtues. We have short-changed the state long enough."

I-told-you-so reaction came from both parties when the Haber report was issued. Republicans said it proved Michigan had a problem. Democrats said it proved Michigan's problem was not as bad as Republicans made it sound. But Williams and Bagwell were in agreement in saying the Haber report indicated there has been too much talk and not enough action.

Special attention is needed to a study of the potentialities of the tourist industry, the Upjohn Institute said. "While this industry will have little to do with growth in the industrialized southern half of the Lower Peninsula, the report said, it would be very helpful in improving the economic status of the remainder of the state."

LAWYER WRITER JOHN D. VOELKER is willing to share the Upper Peninsula after all. Voelker, Michigan Supreme Court justice, indicated in his best-selling "Anatomy of a Murder" that the Mackinac Bridge would spoil the Upper Peninsula by making it too easy for people to get there.

The famous Michigan author set the record straight in "Anatomy of the Upper Peninsula," an article in the 1959 Michigan Yearbook. "I know of no pleasure greater than having others share with me appreciation of a beautiful land,"

2. The results and final cost to the Chamber of the canoe race were presented. The second and final payment on cost of race in the amount of $336.67 to Oscoda was approved.

3. The new book-keeping system of the Chamber's finances was explained and approved.

4. The Chamber, belonging to Michigan Retail Association. Motion by Rochette and seconded by Wolff that the Chamber submit application for membership.

5. Report was made to the Board of approximate cost of the handling of the many details for the S.C.C.A.'s race on October 17.

6. October Newsletter. The board felt that because of the acceptance and approval of the newsletter by the membership that it must be published. Herb Wolff accepted the authorship.

Motion by Rochette and seconded by Wolff that the meeting be adjourned at 6:30 p.m.
